Nor has there been any concerted action to reduce long-term budget deficits or record trade and current account deficits. The result, he says, will be engineers equipped to play a broader role in influencing government policies and practices regarding technological advance. Also, with the speedy flow of information, the margin of maneuver for domestic policy is much reduced, and policy mistakes are quickly punished. Inmostbasicterms,theglobalizationoftheworlddeconomyistheintegratio In this century even more than in the last, national security will draw on the successful development and application of a wide variety of new technologies. One characteristic of Japanese methodology is that new, advanced technologies are applied in practical and simple ways that can be easily commercialized. As experts on the costs and benefits of developing technology, engineers are in a key position to contribute to policy formation of these issues.
