I wish I could thank Steven Erikson for writing this series. The second, Return of the Crimson Guard investigates the fall-out in the Malazan Empire from the devastating losses of the Genabackan, Korelri and Seven Cities campaigns following the events of The Bonehunters. I think it is a monumental piece of fantasy literature that will stand the test of time and Steven Erikson is one of the best all around writers in any genre.

You will know the points when you get to. Raise high on me more time the tattered reds. The fourth novel, House of Chains sees the continuation of this storyline with newly arrived Malazan reinforcements – the 14th Army – taking the war to the rebels. Her enemy, the Forkrul Assail, seek to cleanse the world, to annihilate. They catch up with the Bonehunters. They fight and Calm kills Mappo. The plan was simple - just release the Crippled God from his chains so he can go back to where he came .
